INTRODUCTION
Santri Go International are students who are able to compete in academic and non-academic competitions globally (Jarmadi, 2022). This is in line with the enactment of the ASEAN Economic Community (AEC) Era and free trade, requiring competent and competitive human resources. The world of Islamic boarding schools must really prepareSkills and knowledge of its graduates. This is because the number of Islamic boarding schools in Indonesia has reached 27,722 and the number of students has reached 4,175,531 (ditdpontren., 2022). The data shows that Islamic boarding schools and students have a quantity capable of coloring the era of the Asean Economic Community (AEC). Therefore, pesantren and students must prepare themselves to face this era, one of which is by improving foreign language skills, namely English. The governments of Southeast Asian countries have a consensus to create a free market called the ASEAN Economic Community (AEC). This requires every member of the community to be professional. Therefore, Indonesia as one of the countries in Southeast Asia must be able to use English to communicate with people from various countries and because English is taught in schools, every student is required to master the four English skills which include reading, listening, writing and speaking in order to survive in this global era (Ayu, 2020).

English has become the Lingua Franca in the MEA era. This means that English has become the agreed language for communicating in this free market (Syafitri, 2019). The importance of English proficiency With the mastery of English, it is hoped that Indonesian people, especially students, will have greater bargaining power. English is an international language that functions as a communication tool for people in the whole world. The ability to communicate in English can be used in various aspects of life such as in economic, social, cultural, educational, legal and other aspects (Nurcahyo et al., 2018). Thus, the capital to compete in mastering technology without space and time limits is the ability to communicate in English both written and spoken which can be used in the economic, social, cultural, educational and political sectors. Because English will bridge Indonesian entrepreneurs with entrepreneurs in the ASEAN region in conducting cooperation in trade (Syafitri, 2019).

However, students as an entity of the ASEAN economic community have very weak English skills, especially speaking and writing (Agustina, Rohmah, & Kuspiyah, 2019). In terms of speaking, indicators are speaking skills that are still not fulfilled properly (Kamaliasari & Amrizal, 2021). Furthermore, skills other productive activities such as writing are also still very weak (Susilowati, Pujiantuti, & Zakiyah, 2022). In general, the productive skills of Islamic boarding school students are still very weak so they need to be improved.

The problem faced by Islamic boarding school students is the lack of productive skills (reading and writing). Lack of interest in reading English texts. Lack of English reading resources. There is no special room that supports students' English improvement activities. This is because Islamic boarding schools affiliated with Nahdlatul Ulama (NU) prioritize religious scholarship through mastery of the yellow book rather than foreign languages, especially English (Arifin 2012). This is because the kyai and caretakers of the Islamic boarding school want the students to become religious leaders in the neighborhood them (Sholichin, 2007). In addition, the Islamic boarding school prioritizes moral education to its students first and then followed by life skill for their provision of life (Misbah, 2019). Therefore, Islamic boarding school students in the neighborhood Nahdlatul Ulama (NU) emphasize its students in the formation of morals. This is because, Islamic boarding school students must be able to be role models for society.
Therefore, one of the ways to achieve English proficiency is to increase students' awareness of English. This matter done by carrying out training skills speaking, listening, reading and writing need to be given (Nur’Aini, Utami, & Naima, 2022). Furthermore, abilities skills what is also necessary is English literacy skills including the ability to read, understand, and critically appreciate various forms of communication including spoken language, printed text, and digital media. Literacy has a broader understanding of skills, including speaking and listening, as well as communication that uses not only traditional writing or print but also digital media (Ayu, 2020). In addition, literacy can be interpreted as a tool for sorting out useful information. Information will be filtered with the aim of being efficient in various aspects during the information search process (Litia Yola Putri Febrianti and Oviolanda Irianto, 2017).

METHOD

This activity uses the Participatory Action Research (PAR) method, specifically focusing on problem solving and participatory participation. The text is in the form of simple reading text information about daily activities. With that type of text, students are expected to grow so as to read texts that start with simple texts. There are two topics of text given to students. Each text is an image text. The pictorial text was chosen to emphasize the psychological aspects of the students. The pictorial text made the reader more interested. The implementation of activities to train students' reading habits through repeated exercises through reading two types in this PKM activity is carried out using the same procedure, namely asking students to read a simple text (consisting of only a few simple sentences). In the second text students are asked to practice reading a simple text entitled "Islamic Moderation" twice. Through this text students' interest and habits in learning to read can grow because of two things: the text is simple and related to everyday life and the text is pictorial. Picture text is a form of communication that involves verbal and nonverbal aspects. Aspects of nonverbal communication are more effective in attracting the interest of child-aged readers than verbal ones because psychologically the images that are a manifestation of the non-verbal communication aspect are more attractive and make it easier to convey the contents of the text, especially to child-aged readers.

Listening skills involve a process that is almost the same as listening skills reading, which, in practicing their skills students must be able to make efforts to receive messages in a short amount of time from a text when reading or listening to it. By because they need to be given practice in carrying out these activities against different texts the form is short and the language uses ordinary vocabulary. In In this PKM activity, students are given a text that tells about physical characteristics human which involves the use of some characteristic vocabulary, such as relating to warna: black, brown, yellow, white, gray, blonde, blue, green, red, dark, fair, olive, yang related to the size of short, long, and those related to the form of straight, curly, as shown in Figure 4 below. Students are trained to construct information according to the text that has been prepared by listening to the played text. Until in some parts of the activity, apart from listening to the audio they were also asked to fill in some of the information in the form that has been provided apart from providing listening skills training materials, to sharpen their ability to hear and receive messages through listening to spoken texts delivered in English, students are also given speaking skills training materials to enable them to respond to the messages they receive through listening and listening. Related to the topic in the first text, in the speaking activity students are invited to provide a description of themselves and are invited to communicate with native English speakers through the audio being played.

Language is a social practice so it must be used in training repeatedly and continuously, starting from the context of everyday life to at the intensive context level. Training that is carried out repeatedly is not only make someone able to master the training object but more than that they are capable modify it into activities and situations that can be linked to a variety of other situations so as to provide more benefits. Writing is an activity requires an investment of time and the result is determined by the amount of time invested for him. In this PKM activity, in order to provide training to students about how they should cultivate interest in writing and improve it, they given some exercises in reading a letter prepared and asked to write it down answers to the questions given. In addition they were asked to write the information from the letter in a systematic order.

Therefore, the exercises that must be done to improve these skills are interacting and communicating orally with other people and with oneself. These activities must be carried out repeatedly and continuously so that mastery and modification can occur naturally. In improving students’ speaking skills using English in this PKM, some activities to do are taught to students. Students are motivated to speak to close peers (talking to friends), listening and singing English songs (practice through singing), and participate in activities English study groups (English clubs). Through activities where students meet with their peers or school friends with them they will be more flexible to learn to communicate in English.

In addition, in this mentoring activity, students are presented with several literary genres in doing Story Telling either through short stories, the origins of a region (legend), animal stories (fable) and other folk stories. The purpose of presenting various kinds of literary genres is so that students have variations in story telling activities so that students are not bored with the literary genres they commonly encounter. Besides that, another more important goal is to improve speaking skills (speaking) the students, the more often they read various genres of literature the students even more often practice their speaking skills which include pronunciation, intonation and expression. One of the literary genres presented is the short story. Short stories as a multi-dimensional literary genre can provide many advantages, one of which is that students can acquire various language skills. The characteristics of short stories provide special interest for students, namely in short, modernity, and the variety of stories. When short stories are selected based on students' level of English proficiency, they can offer adequate linguistic, intellectual, and emotional engagement and can enrich students’ learning experience. Thus, story telling in the form of short stories can provide suitable and fun and instructive learning resources for EFL students, this can also improve linguistic abilities and reading and writing skills. Students are invited to make library visits to select reading materials that suit their interests and preferences. Then they were asked to understand the contents of the story by reading it carefully. This activity is called pre story activity.
